Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: . the thoughts and acts and lives of those of the rising generation who fall within the influence of their power, making better and broader men and women of them all. Then here s to the trees! May their mission on earth be better understood by all. And may that day soon come when the wealth of our nation will be measured not by the number of dollars deposited in the banks of this country, nor the assessed value of its property holdings, but solely by the number of trees per capita growing within the crowded and settled confines within which are reared the masses of our population! For it is these, and these alone, that constitute the basis of the true wealth of this country, and the interest return is usurious in the making of better citizens, better statesmen, and better patriots.
